A black and white photograph showing the aftermath of a fire. A two-story wooden house is the central focus, its structure severely compromised. The upper floor appears to be partially missing or heavily damaged, with exposed interior elements. A tall, dark chimney stands on the right side of the house. The foreground is a chaotic scene of debris, with numerous wooden planks, beams, and fragments of the building's exterior scattered across the ground. The background is filled with dense, dark trees and foliage, suggesting a rural or wooded setting. The overall tone is somber and depicts the destruction of a once-standing structure.

EXPLOSION THROWS HOSPITAL INTO PANIC. When an explosion completely wrecked the home of Pasquale Mutarello, known as Morristown's bootlegger king, a hundred patients in Morris County Hospital were thrown into a panic. Photo shows the wrecked house. (P. & A.J)
